Ellispis: What's missing?

Sometimes in writing, unnecessary words are omitted. This is because we know what to expect next and can work out what is meant from the earlier sentence or part of the sentence. Missing them out stops the writing becoming repetitive. As readers or listeners, we make the link to the earlier information.

In each of the examples below, write in the words that are missing.

The first one has been done for you.

2.	Shoun kept his bedroom very tidy. George didn't [].
3.	Mrs Rosen always marked her books in green pen. Mr Horton marked
